Never forget that the black panthers group was only formed to protect Black people from the kkk, who used to kill Black people like animals. ??

However, the Black Panthers was dismantled by the US govt., but the kkk still exists today.

No, tell me this ain't about race.

Better still, tell me why is this so?

Ad Text According to the Correctional Association of New York's most recent statistics, "as of June 2006, 203,100 women were in state or federal prisons or local jails, just under 10% of the total U.S. prison and jail population"—more than two million. In New York alone, as of January 2008, "2,821 women were incarcerated in New York's prisons—about 4.5% of the state's total prison population of 62,577." "More than 65 percent of women in state prisons and 55 percent of men in state prisons report being parents of children under 18."

- "About 64 percent of mothers in state prisons lived with their children before prison, compared to 44 percent of men."
- "About 40 percent of women in state prisons were employed fulltime prior to their arrest, compared with 60 percent of men."
- "Nearly 30 percent were receiving public assistance before arrest, compared to 8 percent of men. About 37 percent had incomes of less than $600 per month prior to arrest, compared to 28 percent of men." ~Real Truth~

Ad Text U.S. ARMY LIFTS BAN ON DREADLOCKS.

After the critics complained about the Army's unfair burden on black women's hair, the U.S. Army again lifted the ban on dreadlocks that was instated in April 2014.

The ban faced an instant backlash from black women so the Army unbanned braids and twists amidst the criticism.

Some of the female soldiers used harsh chemicals to keep their hair straight. Moreover, every eight weeks it cost them to $80. Thus, the ban on dreadlocks caused a lot of unnecessary stress.

The ban on locs, which was part of Army Regulation 670-1, remained until January 2017. The new rules offered female soldiers another hairstyle option. Now the rules allow dreadlocks and locks but only if they are less than a half-inch wide.

Well, it took months for the Army to recognize that black women have different hair texture.

Ad Text There is no appropriate age to fight for your rights and stand for your community. No matter how young you are, you should realize what happens and take the stance of action. If you see that everyone else's effort wasn't enough, you should contribute, too. Just look at this girl. She understands that the problem exists and she's trying to tell people around the country about it. We think she is hoping for the best.

Ad Text Drum and Spear Bookstore in Washington DC was opened by veteran members of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) in summer of 1968. The shop was selling the books of black writers. The next year the owners of Drum and Spear launched its own publishing company. One of co-founders said "We don't define profit in terms of money. The profit is the patronage of the community, which allows the store to self-support." Drum and Spear was aimed to show people the true black culture and history, something beyond the American school program. It's reflected in the name of the shop: the drum is for "communications within the diaspora," and the spear symbolizes "whatever else might be necessary for the liberation of the people."

The best-sellers of early 70s in this shop were such books as the Autobiography of Malcolm X and Eldridge Cleaver's Soul on Ice. This bookstore inspired people around the country to open similar bookstores. Drum and Spear and many other stores were not only the shops, but a "free spaces" for thinking black people where folks could meet and discuss the vital issues. Let's not forget our legacy! We need this drum and we need this spear today, in 2017.

Ad Text Leon Moss, 12, is Atlanta resident. His mother discovered Leon's talent when he was 9-year-old. She began to take him to local museums such as the Apex, the Sights and Sounds Black Cultural Museum and the Fernbank Museum of Natural History.

To improve Leon's skills of painting he began to attend art classes of R. Gregory Christies. Non-profit organization the Southwest Atlanta Youth Business Organization (SWAYBO) also helped Leon in many ways.

According to blacknews.com, the organization gave him lessons of "poise and presentation, public speaking, sales and marketing at marketplaces and how to perform basic accounting formulas. With SWAYBO, Leon has met judges, successful business owners and other pillars of the Black community."

Now Moss makes illustrations and sells the copies of his works. The first book with his illustrations is As Big As God.

That's what we call the support of family and the community! Good luck, Leon! We should believe in ourselves just like Leon's mother believed in him. Our roots are strong; just imagine how strong you can be if only you grow with your roots!

Ad Text This is a huge victory for us!

Harvard University is one of the best schools in the whole world and when a Black woman is becoming a president of Harvard Law Paper it's huge! Education for the Black people was never easy, starting slave period when Black people could be killed for reading a book, including today when thousands of kids cannot get the education because of their skin color and the prejudice of the teachers, and this girl is proving that times are changing. Recently Black women were called the most educated group of people in the US and years by, we can see that those women are starting to make changes. Here and there we hear the news about Black people holding the positions for the first time in history and trust me, it's just a beginning! We are so happy to see the whole nation waking up and realizing the importance of both hustle and education.

Ad Text Ladies & Gents, today we remember one of the realest ever Lone Rangers, Bass Reeves. Mostly described as the “lawman second to none,” a man who was “absolutely fearless and also labelled, the Black Hero Marshal.

Reeves was born to slave parents in 1838 in Crawford County Arkansas, but Bass Reeves would become the first black U.S. Deputy Marshal west of the Mississippi River and one of the greatest frontier heroes in the history of this country.

Ad Text You may not have heard of Zelda Wynn Valdes, but you've certainly seen her designs. This amazing Black fashion designer created the original Playboy bunny costume.

In 1948, was the first Black designer to open up her own shop on Broadway. Valdes created gorgeous gowns many stars like Mae West, Joyce Bryant, Josephine Baker, Gladys Knight, Sarah Vaughan, Dorothy Dandridge, Ella Fitzgerald and countless others.

Although very little is known about her, Zelda Wynn also created costumes for the Dance Theater of Harlem and was a founding partner of the National Association of Fashion and Accessory Designers.

Ad Text Some people's contribution to the Black man's confidence in themselves cannot be overlooked, Y'all remember Nichelle Nichols, popularly known as Uhura?

Well Dr. Martin Luther King once pleaded that she reconsider her decision to quit and stay on StarTrek because her role was so important to the community.

Do you believe similar sacrifices from Black people in white supremacy systems could really influence anything for the ordinary Black man?

Ad Text I see many young Black girls skating and excelling in a field that used to be predominantly white. In the sense that efforts were really made to prevent Black people from participating in such sports, back in the days.

But thanks to Debi Thomas and other Black skaters, we changed the game and on Feb. 8, 1986, Debi became the first Black skater to hold a US national titles in ladies' single figure skating.

Debi, a physician, became the 1986 World champion, the 1988 Olympic bronze medalist, and a two-time U.S. national champion.

Ad Text Lemme take a minute of your time and remind you how much we are magical on planet earth.

This little King right here, now probably 11-years (8-y-o in the pic.) recently finished a Science Course at Imperial College London University was and still reigns as the smartest kid on planet earth, studied at the Oxford University at the age of 6.

And yes, he was too advanced for his required school grade so that lead him into being homeschooled. He excels in Math, Foreign Languages, History, Philosophy, IT and Science.

Now tell me Black people are not magic!

Ad Text Turning bureaucracy against themselves.

We have suffered a 40pc unemployment rate from layers of federal regulation applied only to tribal lands, but it hasn't stop Fort Berthold from becoming one of the state's most productive regions. Currently a coalition of Native Americans appointed by to guide country's Indian policy is researching proposals to make energy development easier on tribal lands - including the idea of transferring them to private ownership. This way, big corporations finally won't be allowed to rob and destroy our lands. We are strong not only by our unparalleled unity, but also by our ability to see the bigger picture.

"I'm formerly incarcerated, I spent a lot of my childhood in different systems and I had no idea about the beast that communities of color are fighting. My mother didn't know about the school-to-prison pipeline, she just knew she had a black boy." Coleman explained how his work with wrongfully-convicted clients had shaped his view of the U.S. criminal justice system, which he described as racially lopsided. "It's not by choice that most of my clients are African American," Coleman said. "It's a fact of life and of the prison system. If most of the people going into the system are black men, most of my clients will be too." The Duke Journal of Gender Law and Policy hosted a symposium Tuesday focusing on efforts to improve criminal justice and the American prison system. Titled "Intersectionality and the Black Lives Matter Movement," the event featured a panel of speakers, including James Coleman, John S. Bradway professor of the practice of law, and Umar Muhammad, community organizer for the Southern Coalition for Justice, along with Theresa Newman, clinical professor of law. "I didn't feel prepared for the world. I didn't feel rehabilitated. I had no resources," Muhammad said. ~The Chronicle~
